Acknowledgments

As lead editor for the first issue I wanted to take the time to acknowledge the multitude of people who have helped us launch this project here at Swarthmore College. First and foremost the students who make up the Critical Education Policy Studies (CEPS) group! Your leadership and commitment to the project despite there being no pay, makes this first issue so much sweeter! To the Swarthmore Writing Programs Jill Gladstein (Director) and Maggie Christ (Writing Associate) whose commitment to make all us stronger writers and thinkers. Maggie, the authors and the CEPS group are so deeply indebted to you. Many thanks must also go to Roberto Vargas, Maria Aghazarian and Kate Carter at the Swarthmore Library, who have helped us make the journal something accessible and meaningful to the public. A huge debt of thanks go to Alondra Rosales who ultimately became THE designer of the first issue (“This thing looks really legit!!”). Finally a note of thanks to the Department of Educational Studies for supporting us on various levels throughout this process
