Course Description

(NB: This course is taught in German and all of the assignments are in German. The detailed schedule in Moodle is also in German.)

This course serves as an introduction to the interdisciplinary field of German Studies. German culture has played a seminal role in the history and culture of modern Europe, influencing and shaping the European spirit in all manner of ways. However, rather than survey the rich history of contributions of German-speaking people to European and world culture, this course will focus on the relatively small period of German Romanticism (during the late 18th and early 19th century). As we proceed we will ask the following questions: what is German culture? How has it been defined? What is German Romanticism? What themes permeate the German Romantic tradition? How are they like or unlike themes in other similar literary traditions? Who are some significant figures in literature, music, philosophy, visual arts, architecture, and how have they influenced subsequent generations of artists and intellectuals? In addition to answering these basic questions, we will use the Romantics as a lens to learn about German culture on a larger scale. The Romantics’ deep connection with earlier cultural époques, such as the Middle Ages, and their reaction against Classicism, Rationalism and the Enlightenment will give students a chance to learn about various movements of thought in German culture. We can then trace the echoes of the Romantics through the centuries to the present day and ask if there are contemporary cultural movements with sensibilities similar to those of the Romantics. Authors we will look at will include Wackenroder, Schelling, Schleiermacher, Schlegel, Tieck, Novalis, ETA Hoffmann, von Arnim, Hölderlin, Kleist, Goethe, Beethoven, Wagner, Schubert, Runge, Casper David Friedrich, Schinkel, Grimm.

Students will learn the vocabulary necessary for critical discussions of literature, visual arts, and cultural theory. Throughout the semester, short assignments will allow students to hone their writing skills. Additionally, class discussion, as well as short class presentations, will support the students’ efforts to learn and correctly use the necessary vocabulary. During the semester, students will work on a digital project that consists of creating a timeline of the various cultural artifacts discussed in the classroom. This team-based project will introduce students to working with free online digital databases offered by German libraries and private online resources that contain information relevant to the study of German Romanticism. It will also afford students an opportunity to research and so more fully appreciate the historical circumstances and cultural backgrounds that have influenced the creation of the texts we will discuss in class. Students will also write an essay that will demonstrate their critical skills and use of vocabulary.

Fall 2018 accommodations statement

If you believe you need accommodations for a disability or a chronic medical condition, please contact Student Disability Services (Parrish 113W, 123W) via email at studentdisabilityservices@swarthmore.edu to arrange an appointment to discuss your needs. As appropriate, the office will issue students with documented disabilities or medical conditions a formal Accommodations Letter. Since accommodations require early planning and are not retroactive, please contact Student Disability Services as soon as possible. For details about the accommodations process, visit the Student Disability Services website. You are also welcome to contact me (Madalina Meirosu, mmeiros1@swarthmore.edu) privately to discuss your academic needs. However, all disability-related accommodations must be arranged, in advance, through Student Disability Services.

Communication etiquette

I will send emails from Moodle and post announcements in Moodle should anything occur that requires your attention. Please consider my office hours as a welcoming space in which to explore ideas, ask for help, or simply talk about German Romanticism and German culture. I will answer your emails within 24 hours, including during the weekend.

I expect students to let me know if there may be issues affecting their performance or attendance. You should email me in advance if you will miss a class. A short and discreet email stating that a medical/family emergency will prevent you from attending class is sufficient; there is no need to go into detail (unless you feel it would help you to share more).

GRADING

Four Tests 20%
Homework (writing assignments, short essay, digital timeline class project) 30%
In-class participation, 4 oral presentations 25%
